Comments:

This architectural drawing shows a detailed elevation of a building facade. It features a variety of window and door types, each labeled with a specific code. The labels are as follows:

- 3D01: A red label pointing to a set of three small, arched windows on a tall, narrow section of the facade.
- 1D01: A red label pointing to a single, large, arched window on the right side of the facade.
- GD01: A red label pointing to a small, arched window on the left side.
- GD02: A red label pointing to a large, arched window on the left side.
- GD03: A red label pointing to a small, arched window in the center section.
- GD04: A red label pointing to a small, arched window in the center section.
- GD05: A red label pointing to a large, arched window on the right side.
- GD06: A red label pointing to a small, arched window on the right side.

The drawing also includes various other architectural details such as chimneys, rooflines, and decorative elements. The labels are color-coded: red for windows and blue for doors.
